

Beach fun

Kids love the beach, so when we got the opportunity to spend a day at the beach last week, we grabbed the chance. Off we went, buckets and spades in hand to the beach.

In the morning, we went to the local stoney beach and decided to do something a bit different. We took paints. Pinky and Boo got straight onto painting stones. They painted a spider, a flower and lots of pretty patterns and colours. It was really lovely to paint outdoors in a beautiful setting in the fresh air, lis

Next Boo decided to paint a picture. She painted the sea, the beach and the sun, then added several sea monsters! She was so pr

BB loved throwing stones in the sea, then Pinky joined him and they experimented with what stones worke

Stoney beaches are great, but you can't beat a sandy beach for children to have fun on, so in the afternoon we decided to drive to a different beach.

We spent the afternoon digging, building sand castles, collecting buckets of water, jumping waves, burying feet, getting messy and getting very wet. The children adored their afternoon on the beach

togeth

r.

I love this picture of Pinky and Boo sitting waiting for the sea to come to them, to fill their buckets,

It's a
wet!! I thin k a
day
on the beac h
with
chil dren
, no
matt er
how
war m it is (or not),
is
alwa ys a winner. The fun you can have is fantastic. There is so much you can do from traditional building of sand castles, throwing stones and jumping waves to having a go at some painting on the beach. Why not give it a go, take the paints out with you and see what the children create?

