

Word of the week - family

One blog I love reading is 'The Reading Residence' and new for 2014, she is starting up a new linky called 'word of the week'. It is a lovely idea of choosing a word that sums up your week. I am keen to join in with this as much as possible, so here's my word for this week.....

The reason I have chosen 'family' as my word this week, is that for us, this christmas and new year period is all about family. We have spent a great deal of time together and visited other members of the family this last week. We have had lots of fun and games and definitely focused on us as a family unit. It has been a really lovely week and certainly one I want to remember.

The picture above is a picture of us all making cookies together as a family, we all had a good stir, even daddy and Nana, unfortunately daddy is taking the photo, that's why he's not in it.