

Let kids be kids linky 29/4/14

Welcome to let kids be kids linky.

This is a linky all about letting kids be kids, getting back to basics and having great childhood fun. We live in such a fast paced modern world with so much technology and stresses round every corner, we often need to be reminded to just 'play' and have fun, it's healthy for us all (yes, that includes you parents!).

Please join me in spreading the word, for encouraging children to step away from the technology for a while and go out, run around, use their imaginations and just have general basic FUN!

Have you all had a good week, back to normal school runs etc after the easter break. We have been doing a lot of DIY and the children loved helping with the planting of our new border, using garden on a roll, which basically means planting by letters. You can read all about it here. We also had a lot of fun playing and learning with water beads.

I went to Tots100 Blog camp on saturday and it was fantastic to meet lots of lovely bloggers. I learnt a lot and am now very much looking forward to Britmums in June.

Thank you to all the lots of lovely posts linked up last week. It looks like you all had a great easter. Our little house in the country shared the most free flow messy play session I've seen, while Twice a mummy double the fun showed us how to make a beautiful mini photographic bunting with the children and Mummy to boyz made some fantastic super hero biscuits.

There's not many rules, just link up your posts, old or new, about genuine childhood fun (of any age). It may be fun outdoors, jumping in puddles, nature hunts, riding bikes or making mud pies. Or it may be fun indoors with arts and crafts, making dens, cooking, messy play or reading. Or how about visiting a farm or fun at a fete. Or a discussion about kids growing up too fast, etc.

Whatever basic fun you have been having or discussing, link up and share your ideas, visit others to get inspiration and comment to give each other encouragement and support, but most importantly, HAVE FUN!

This linky will open every Tuesday for 6 days, so there's plenty of time to add your posts.

Please spread the word and grab my badge from my sidebar if possible.

If you tweet me your link (@karenattwinlife), I will happily retweet.
